[illegible]

[The text is highly illegible due to extreme fading and bleed-through from the reverse side. It appears to be a single paragraph of prose, possibly a letter or a legal document, containing several lines of text separated by spaces and some punctuation marks like commas and periods. There are also some small, dark markings that could be initials or symbols.]

[The following text is a dense, handwritten manuscript in a medieval script, likely Latin or Italian. It appears to be a collection of notes or a letter, written on parchment. The handwriting is cursive and somewhat difficult to decipher due to its age and style. The text is organized into several paragraphs, separated by small gaps or indentations. Some words are written in larger, bolder letters, possibly indicating the start of new sections or important terms. The overall appearance is that of a historical document.]

[The text begins with a large initial 'P' followed by 'propter quod actus actualis dicitur actualis...']

[The text continues with several lines of dense handwriting, discussing concepts like 'actus', 'potestas', and 'intellectus'. There are many small corrections and additions throughout the page.]

[The text ends with a large initial 'S' followed by 'scilicet motus...']

[illegible]

[The following text is a highly degraded scan of a handwritten manuscript page, likely from a medieval or early modern legal or philosophical treatise. The handwriting is cursive and difficult to decipher. It appears to contain several paragraphs of text, possibly discussing logic, metaphysics, or law. Key words like "actus", "potestas", "essentia", and "effectus" are faintly visible.]

[illegible]

Handwritten text in the left margin, likely a commentary or gloss, written in a medieval script.

Handwritten text in the main body of the right page, written in a medieval script. The text is dense and covers most of the page area.

[The following text is a dense, handwritten manuscript in a cursive script, likely from a 16th-century Italian or Spanish source. It appears to be a collection of notes or a draft of a letter, discussing various topics related to land, money, and possibly legal matters. The handwriting is very close and difficult to decipher without specialized knowledge of the script.]

[The following text is a dense Latin manuscript, likely from a medieval legal or philosophical work. It contains numerous abbreviations and some red ink used for initials or headings. The script is a cursive hand typical of the late Middle Ages.]

[Due to the extreme density and frequent use of abbreviations, the specific words are difficult to transcribe accurately without specialized knowledge of the shorthand used. However, the text appears to discuss concepts related to law, justice, and possibly the nature of the soul or mind, given the context of the surrounding folios which mention "anima" and "corpus".]
